CORPORATION BONDS NOT EXEMPT FROM TAXATION Issued by Connecticut Gas, Electric Light and Manufacturing Cos'

Tax Commissioner William H. Corbin has received from Attorney General John H. Light an orinion upon his inquiry as to whether bonds issued by the electric light, gas and manufacturing course. facturing corporations of this state may be exempt from taxation under Section 2319 of the General Statutes. In his answer he says that Section 3823 of the General Statutes expressly makes such bonds taxable, except when otherwise provided.

The law is clear that exemption from taxation must be strictly construed.

He further finds that the only statute which can be claimed to exempt in any way such property from tax-ation is Section 2319 of the General Statutes which provides:

"Money issued on interest with an agreement that the borrower shall pay the taxes thereon, and secured by a mortgage on real estate in this state, mortgage on real estate in this state, shall, to an amount equal to the assessed value of the mortgaged land in the assessment list of the town where it is situated, be exempt from taxa-words used are "notes, bonds, stocks, moneys," etc. In view of the express designations of Section 2323, the omission of the words "notes, bonds and stocks" in Section 2313, which in its present form was passed at a later date, is very significant.

If further assistance is needed to indicate the legislative intent, such as-sistance is found in the fact that im-posing taxes upon moneys at interest, the expression was used twice, once it reference to moneys at interest secured by notes or bands or responsible per-sons and a second time in reference to moneys on interest secured by mort-gage of real estate.

"All moneys at interest secured by notes or bonds of responsible persons, resident in this state or elsewhere, except money loaned by this state, and all moneys on interest, secured by mortgage on real estate in this state mortgage on real estate in this state or elsewhere, more than the owners pay interest for shall be set in the list at 6 per cent."

Thus, at this early date, there seems to have been a differentiation made by the legislature between "moneys at interest secured by bonds, and moenys on interest secured by mortgage."

When, therefore, the act in question (Section 2319) omits all reference to (Section 2319) omits all reference to moneys at interest secured by bonds," the natural inference is that the legslature did not intend that section to apply to anything other than the or-dinary morigage loans. Considered alone this intent seems therefore to be conclusively shown. A fortiori is such the case when considered in connection with the rule of construction against exemptions above referred to.

It is true that the policy of this state is to avoid double taxation, but, nevertheless, a tax will not be declared void because it may impose double taxation, for the reason that the con-stitution does not forbid such taxa-Nettleton's Appeal, 76 Conn., 225; Security Co. vs. Hartford, 61 Conn., 102; Lockwood vs. Weston, 61 Conn.

It may be that where bonds are secured by trust mortgage deeds they Engine and Drowned.

The attorney general cites authorities to show that taxation of a bond secured by a trust mortrage deed is not necessarily double taxation, even though the real estate of the corporation be also taxed at its full corne.

A good and what would appear to be a sufficient reason for limiting moneys loaned on interest from exemption from taxation to cases of ordinary mortgages, is found in the fact that mortgages are rarely made for anything approaching the assessed value of the property, and, therefore, it will be only upon very rare occasions that the mortgages would ever be called upon to have such property assessed and to pay a tax upon the excess over the assessed value of the mortgage property, while, in the case of bonds secured by a deed of mortgage property, while, in the case of bonds secured by a deed of mortgage property, while, in the case of bonds secured by a deed of mortgage property, while, in the case of bonds secured by a deed of mortgage property. The legislature may very well have feit that, to exempt the ordinary corporate bonds from taxation under Section 2519, would impose a difficult and almost endless under taking upon the part of the various assessors throughout the state, as such bonds might be held by a thousand different persons living in various towns throughout the state. This argument of inconvenience would seem to be quite sufficient to account for the library corporate bonds from taxation under Section 2519, would impose a difficult and almost endless under taking upon the part of the various assessors throughout the state. This argument of inconvenience would seem to be quite sufficient to account to technical the control of the corporation to account for the legislature.

The attorney general cites of the deed is not necessarily double taxation, even the case of the corporation to exempt the country against the season of the mortgage would seem to a sufficient to account for the legislature.

Horse Walked Onto Railroad Track.

Thursday, Nov. 24, 1864.—Tuesday morning, Mr. John G. Standish left his horse and truck standing near William horse and truck standing near William onds are exempt from taxation? They are not exempt. The most that can be said is that the whole issue, by virtue of being secured by mortgage, is ex-empt to an amount equal to the as-sessed value of the mortgaged land in the assessment list of the town where the assessment list of the town where it is situated. Prima facte, all the bonds of such corporations are subject to taxation, and it cannot be said that there is any general statute providing otherwise. To entitle the noiders of such bonds to the exemption -iven under Section 2319, they would have to show that, in the meaning of the statute they have simply loaned money on interest, with an loaned money on interest, with an agreement that the borrower shall pay the taxes thereon, and that the same is secured by a mortgage on real es-tate in this state. If this con be shown they are exempt. If it cannot be hown, they are not exempt, Comporations cannot determine for hemselves that their bonds are ex-empt from taxation. The most they empt from taxation. The most they can do is to agree to pay any tax imposed on them, but such agreement imposed on them, but such agreement will not serve to excuse a bondholder from "setting" his bonds in his list in the town where he resides, under Section 2323. It would seem to be the duty of the assessors, in case a bondholder cou'd show that he comes within the exception of Section 2319, above referred to, to ascertain the actual valuation of such bonds, and to determine the excess, if any, of the value of the bonds over the assessed value of the mortgaged land.
